UPCOMING COMMUNITY EVENTS

Life of Pi (film)

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Life of Pi is a 2012 American 3D live-action/computer-animated adventure drama film based on Yann Martel's 2001 novel of the same name. Directed by Ang Lee, the film is based on an adapted screenplay by David Magee, and stars Suraj Sharma, Irrfan Khan, Gérard Depardieu, Tabu, and Adil Hussain.

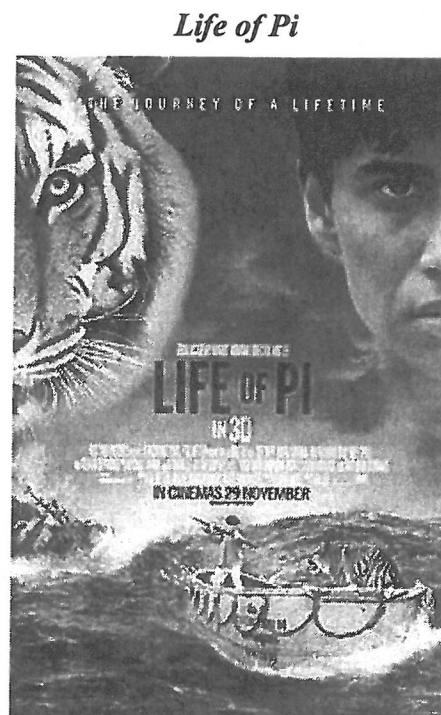

The storyline revolves around a 16-year old Indian boy named Piscine Molitor "Pi" Patel, who survives a shipwreck in which his family dies, and is stranded in the Pacific Ocean on a lifeboat with a Bengal tiger named Richard Parker.

The film had its worldwide premiere as the opening film of the 50th New York Film Festival at both the Walter Reade Theater and Alice Tully Hall in New York City on September 28, 2012.^[3]

Upon release, Life of Pi became a critical and commercial success, earning over $600 million worldwide. At the 85th Academy Awards it had eleven nominations, including Best Picture, and won four (the most for the evening) including Best Director for Ang Lee.^[4] It was also nominated for three Golden Globe Awards which included the Best Picture – Drama and the Best Director and won the Golden Globe Award for Best Original Score.

MILLIONAIRE
AND THE MUMMIES

THEODORE DAVIS'S GILDED AGE
in the VALLEY OF THE KINGS

JOHN M. ADAMS

The Millionaire and the Mummies

Posted on February 22, 2012

An eccentric American robber baron named Theodore M. Davis set the record, between 1902 and 1914, for discovering tombs in Egypt's Valley of the Kings – a total of eighteen. He was the most famous Egyptian explorer in the world in his day and made important and lasting contributions to archaeology, but the discovery of King Tut in 1922 (by Howard Carter, who had worked for Davis for three years) erased his memory from public awareness; today he is forgotten.

My biography of him, the first ever written, will be published by the St. Martin's Press in the Spring of 2013. "THE MILLIONAIRE AND THE MUMMIES: How Theodore Davis Used a Stolen Fortune to Transform Archaeology in the Gilded Age" will explain his dramatic rise from rags to riches, resolve many of the controversies about Davis's career and reveal him as a human being who redeemed a life of double-dealing by contributing a unique legacy to the world. His dealings with "Boss" Tweed, J.P. Morgan and Theodore Roosevelt, the mansion in Newport which he shared with his wife and his mistress, and the international celebrity his Egyptian excavations produced create a fascinating tale of ambition, fraud, luxurious living and ancient tombs.

"It's high time we had a biography of Theodore Davis, the eccentric millionaire who cut a wide swath in Egyptology (and elsewhere) during the 1900's. Was he as big a crook as some of us suspected? John Adams has the answer!" -Dr. Barbara Mertz, author of "Temples, Tombs and Hieroglyphs" and, as "Elizabeth Peters," of the best-selling Amelia Peabody mystery series.

Plot

Reg, Wilf and Cissy are retired former opera singers who often worked together, living in Beecham House, a retirement home for gifted musicians, patterned after the real-life Casa di Riposo per Musicisti founded by Giuseppe Verdi. The musicians and singers living in the house put on a gala concert on Verdi's birthday every year. Finances threaten closure of the home,^[3] but proceeds from the concert hold hope for a revival. The arrival of Reg's ex-wife, Jean, has old rivalries and theatrical temperaments flaring up again and it becomes unclear if the show will or will not go on.^[4] Three of the four are keen to recreate the third act quartet "Bella figlia dell'amore" from Rigoletto and one is not.

Plot

Artie Decker is fired as an announcer for a minor league baseball team in Fresno because he is not up on new technology or how to use it. Artie is disappointed, because he loved the job. Meanwhile, Alice and her husband decide to go on a business vacation. When Alice is not able to get her husband's parents to look after the kids, she reluctantly asks her parents (Artie and Diane) to look after the children because they are "weird."

Artie and Diane agree to visit Atlanta to look after their three grandchildren when their parents (type-A helicopter parents) are on the business vacation. Artie tells his grandchildren to call him Artie and never "Grandpa" but is nicknamed Fartie by the youngest child, Barker, who is defiant and cheeky. Harper is very tense, due to her preparation for a upcoming violin audition. Diane advises her granddaughter to have some fun and not worry about
